Liz Toth, APRN, CNP

I have been involved in the field of nursing for over 25 years. I began my career as a nurse in hospital acute care. After completing my Masters Degree in Nursing, I decided to devote my advanced nursing practice caring for the geriatric and adult population in the long-term care setting. I believe my mission in this occupation is to be open, honest, accessible and approachable making the relationship with the resident and family/loved one a personable and comfortable experience. I am truly blessed to work in the field of Geriatrics. It is an honor and a privilege for me to focus on quality health care for this patient population.

If primary care doctors are the "people doctors," then seniors are by far my favorite people. Getting to know my patients and their families is something I value highly. Guiding them through the decisions and complexities that arise in their health care is also highly rewarding. It is at GENEVIVE, helping the frailest of these patients manage chronic disease, acute illness and end-of-life transitions, where I believe a physician can have the greatest impact in primary care.
